

THE MORNING KICKOFF

📍 FIFA World Cup 26 — United States · Canada · Mexico · The final is set: Spain–Argentina at MetLife on Sunday

🏆 England 1–2 Argentina — Messi's two late assists flip the semi in four minutes

📺 Sunday's final: Spain–Argentina, 21:00 our time — third place France–England Saturday

★ Crystal Ball: England 2–1 missed — both semi calls fell. Record now 5 from 9

⚡ SEMI-FINAL 2 · ENGLAND 1–2 ARGENTINA

TWO ASSISTS FROM ETERNITY.

For half an hour, England were headed to MetLife: Anthony Gordon tapped in Morgan Rogers' cross in the 55th and Pickford was repelling everything. Then Messi took over. Enzo Fernández equalised from distance in the 85th, and two minutes into stoppage time Lautaro Martínez headed Messi's cross in at the back post. The champions live on — and Sunday's final is the one the whole tournament pointed to: Spain against Argentina.

Lionel Messi — no goal, both assists. At 39, one game from back-to-back World Cups.

KICKOFF

⚡ LATE DRAMA

📍 Mercedes-Benz Stadium, Atlanta

England

1 – 2

FULL TIME

Argentina

⚽ Gordon 55' · from Rogers' cross

⚽ Enzo Fernández 85' · long-range strike

⚽ Lautaro Martínez 90'+2 · header · Messi cross

This fixture never does mercy. England played the disciplined, patient game Tuchel promised, and when Morgan Rogers' curling cross found Anthony Gordon at the far post in the 55th, Atlanta's away end believed. Pickford — twice from Álvarez, once from a Nicolás González header — kept the lead alive as Argentina's pressure built and the fouls piled up in a fractious, stop-start contest.

Then, as he has for twenty years, Messi decided otherwise. In the 85th he slipped the pass that Enzo Fernández hammered home from range. Two minutes into stoppage time his cross found Lautaro Martínez at the back post, and the header ended it. England's first defeat of the tournament came five minutes from a first final since 1966; the champions march on to face Spain — the final everyone wanted.

MATCH TIMELINE

● Argentina above · ● England below

★ STAR OF THE MATCH

Lionel Messi

Quiet for eighty minutes, decisive in the ten that mattered: two assists, one final. At 39, he is one win from becoming the first back-to-back champion since Brazil in 1962.

Lautaro Martínez

The extra-time winner against Switzerland, now the stoppage-time header that broke England. Argentina's closer keeps arriving exactly on time.

⚡ England led from the 55th to the 85th — five minutes from MetLife when Enzo Fernández struck from outside the box

⚽ Messi finished with no goal but both assists, the second a right-footed cross Lautaro headed in at the back post in the 92nd

🛑 Pickford denied Álvarez twice and tipped over a González header — a scrappy game with 19 first-half fouls brought only two yellows

➔ WHAT IT MEANS Sunday at MetLife: Spain–Argentina, the tournament's two best sides, 21:00 our time. England drop to Saturday's third-place match against France in Miami.

THIRD PLACE · SATURDAY · MIAMI

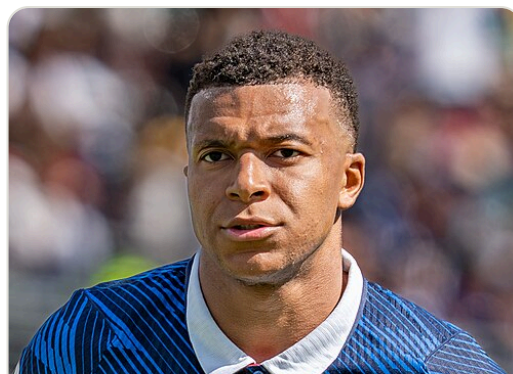

Sat 23:00

Kick-off 5:00 PM ET at the stadium

Hard Rock Stadium, Miami

The game neither wanted, carrying the prize both strikers do: the Golden Boot. Mbappé (8) needs one goal to break his tie with Messi — who plays a day later. Kane (5) and Bellingham (4) get one last swing; so does Dembélé (5). The early market makes France heavy favourites at 50%, with England and the draw level on 26 — heavy legs and heavier hearts after Atlanta.

- ⦿ Mbappé one goal from the outright Golden Boot lead — with Messi watching from the final
- ⦿ How England respond four days after losing a final spot in the 92nd minute
- ⦿ Expect rotation everywhere — third-place games are historically the tournament's most open

KEY MAN · FRANCE

Kylian Mbappé

Blanked by Spain, stuck on 8, and handed one more game. A goal in Miami and the Golden Boot is effectively his — unless Messi answers at MetLife on Sunday.

THE FINAL · SUNDAY · METLIFE

Sun 21:00

Kick-off 3:00 PM ET at the stadium

MetLife Stadium, New York / New Jersey

The two best teams of the tournament, and it isn't close: Spain's record wall against the champions who refuse to die. Spain have conceded twice all tournament; Argentina have won their last three knockouts after trailing or level in the closing stages. Yamal against Messi — the heir against the throne. The early money leans Spanish: 42 to 27, with a third of it on the draw. The Crystal Ball returns Sunday morning with the full call.

- ⦿ Yamal v Messi — the 18-year-old face of the next decade against the 39-year-old face of the last two
- ⦿ Argentina's late-game sorcery against a Spain side that simply never trails
- ⦿ Oyarzabal (5 goals) quietly two behind the Boot leaders — and he plays the biggest stage of all

KEY MAN · SPAIN

Lamine Yamal

A penalty won against France, a semi-final owned, and now the stage every 18-year-old dreams of. Beat Argentina and the torch isn't passed — it's taken.
